Q: Using relational operators in list selection I would like to write a list of names from a list and join them into one result list. My code looks like this: Lp = ['a', 'b', 'c', 'd'] Lresult = [] for x in Lp: for y in Lp: if x == y: Lresult.append(x +'and'+ y) This leads to the following result: [a and b and a and c] Which I'm not interested in. What I would like to get is: ['a and a and b and c'] I guess I need to use some type of relational operator, but unfortunately the default operator is not the one I'm looking for. Edit After looking through a bit I found the function chain which does what I want with the following example: Lp = ['a', 'b', 'c', 'd'] Lresult = [] chain(Lp, 1) == ['a and a and b and c'] A: You can use string formatting to compose your string: Lresult ='and '.join(['%s and %s' % (x, y) for x, y in zip(Lp, Lp[1:]))] This uses the more natural zip(Lp, Lp[1:]) instead of using for x in Lp:. It is also more efficient. Q: inheriting a template class with template argument I am trying to inherit a template class with template argument. I am getting an error saying "error C2955: 'T' : illegal use of class template" and I am not able to figure out what is wrong. Below is the code which I am trying to execute. template class A { public: typedef void func(T,U); }; template class B : A { public: func(T,T) {} }; int main() { B bl; } A: As mentioned

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a multilayer wiring board and a method of producing the multilayer wiring board, which comprises forming an interlayer insulating film on each of an insulating substrate or film and a conductive layer provided on the insulating substrate or film, and subsequently forming a conductive layer pattern on the interlayer insulating film on the conductive layer, wherein the conductive layer is formed by a sputtering method. 2. Description of Related Art In the semiconductor industry, high-speed semiconductor devices using BGA (Ball Grid Array) technology is advancing its development and consequently, highly dense packaging of the semiconductor devices is made possible. FIGS. 3A to 3C, for example, show multilayer wiring boards before and after the wiring layers are provided on the surface of a wiring board and the wiring layers are hardened. More specifically, FIGS. 3A to 3C show a multilayer wiring board before the wiring layers are provided on the surface of an interlayer insulating film 2 and the wiring layers are hardened. The multilayer wiring board shown in FIGS. 3A to 3C is produced as follows. First, in FIG. 3A, a conductive layer 3 is formed on a copper-plate substrate 1. Subsequently, a pattern 4 of an insulating resin is formed on the conductive layer 3. Subsequently, the resultant structure is heated in a nitrogen atmosphere at 150° C. for 1 hour, thereby depositing a resin-like film 5 of the insulating resin on the copper-plate substrate 1. Subsequently, as shown in FIG. 3B, openings 6 are formed in the resin-like film 5 on the conductive layer 3. Subsequently, as shown in FIG. 3C, the conductive layer 3 is etched, and wiring layers 7 are formed on the surface of the resin-like film 5. In the multilayer wiring board shown in FIGS. 3A to 3C, however, when holes are formed in the resin-like film 5 for forming the openings 6, the resin-like film 5 is cracked. Thus, the electrical characteristics of the resultant multilayer wiring board may be impaired. Therefore, the manufacturing yield of multilayer wiring boards may be lowered.Q: Display contents of a folder one by one I have a folder with pictures, and every image has the same format; I would
