I want to create a trigger that will insert a data automatically into another table. It depends on an int column, for example if this column has a value between 2 and 5 I want to insert a data. Is it possible to create a trigger that will insert a data automatically into another table

if an int column has a value between 2 and 5? I want to know how it is possible. A: You can do this with the following SQL:

CREATE TRIGGER

[dbo].[YourTriggerName] ON [dbo].[YourTableName] AFTER INSERT
AS BEGIN DECLARE @val1 int; DECLARE @val2 int; DECLARE @val3
int; SELECT @val1 = yourcol, @val2 = yourcol+1, @val3 = yourcol + 2 FROM inserted; IF(@val1 BETWEEN 2 AND 5)
    INSERT INTO YourOtherTableName (yourcols) VALUES (@val1) END; That said, I wouldn't recommend this. What happens if you insert 6 values into yourcol?

Your trigger will be hit, twice. St. Maria Goretti, Patroness of Martyrs St. Maria Goretti, Patroness of Martyrs Facts: St. Maria Goretti (called Maria Goretti in English, as her given name is Maria Luisa) was born the daughter of a wealthy farmer, Signor Ugo Carusi, in the Italian countryside in 1870. Timothy Aeppli / Pool Photo via Getty Images China and Russia accused the Obama administration of politically motivated cyber-attacks after the U.S. said it hacked into a Chinese military computer.

The accusations came after President Obama made the announcement that the U.S. would be stepping up cyber-attack capabilities. The Obama administration said the hack was aimed at exposing human rights abuses in the country. "Why us?" China asked. "Was it to embarrass China?"

The question came at a news conference between Chinese President Xi Jinping and Russian President Vladimir Putin. The two leaders did not refer to the U.S. accusations in their joint press conference. The Obama administration said the cyber-attack, which took place July 5, was tied to a Chinese
