Memory may be mapped to any of the three system busses in the EVM8. Power management features include user defined clock and supply configurations, DDR3/SDRAM frequency adjustment for each core, and provides 32 VCI power domains. The EVM8 is pin and package compatible with the EVM7 and provides software and hardware development partners with ready to use standard libraries and documentation. Also included with the new EVM8, is the ability to turn the ARM Cortex-A53 CPU off entirely and use one of the EVM8 cores instead. Using the EVM8 as a general purpose SOC core is extremely flexible allowing it to be a variety of different products. The EVM8 has been designed for original equipment manufacturer (OEM) products including tablet and smartphone systems. It offers industry leading performance and high-volume and extreme applications with the flexibility to customize the EVM8 for a wide range of products.
