The alveolar type is the most common subtype of osteosarcoma which accounts for about 50% of all osteosarcomas \[@3\]. Most patients have long-bone involvement (88.5%) and the distal tibia is the most common site of origin. The upper extremity, pelvis, and trunk are unusual locations for osteosarcoma \[@4\]. The purpose of this report is to present a rare case of osteosarcoma of the distal ulna in an adolescent female. CASE REPORT ===== A 13-year-old adolescent girl with right distal ulna swelling was admitted to our hospital. On admission, there was no local or systemic sign. Plain radiography showed a sclerotic lesion involving the distal
