An action RPG video game developed by COMPUTER WORKS in the DeNA Lab. "Tarnished" is a game that takes the player's experience of traveling through the lands between as a rule and the player brings that experience to the world of computer games. "Tarnished" uses the world where the lands between are connected to form a vast and open world. In this world, there is a living story with a variety of environments. Detailed Features ***** ● A Successor to "Deception" In the recent installment of the "Deception" series, the game takes a free and open-world genre while preserving the carefully constructed and detailed environments. The goal of "Tarnished" is to develop a story in an open-world RPG. "Tarnished" inherits the "Deception" series' characteristic of charm and beauty. "Tarnished" will surprise you with a story in which there is a living and dangerous setting that the player encounters for the first time. As a result, the game provides a high sense of satisfaction and a new dimension to the story. ● Enjoy the Story of the Lands Between The Lands Between (Lands Between) are created as a space in the game server and is a region where the user's character resides. If the user opens the Lands Between, the characters that the user has accumulated will be expanded to the region. Along with the expansion of the characters, the user will be placed in the area where the user is currently located. The story unfolds in a story which the user brings as an element of the gameplay. ● Play as You Like "Tarnished" is an action RPG where the player can play in any way they like. There are no restrictions on the style of gameplay. The strength of the characters is adjusted in the game, so the size of the area where the characters fight becomes proportionally large. "Tarnished" is a game where the possibility of the player's actions is easy to imagine, which is different from other action RPGs where the player can only do the maneuvers his/her character can do, and it's impossible to do the fight with other characters. ● Deceptive Gameplay There is a built-in and unique defeat system that utilizes the enemies' chaotic movements. "Tarnished" is a game where the player can interact with the game through the game engine that is able to simulate

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to field effect transistors (FET) and particularly to high-speed FETs fabricated in bulk silicon. 2. Description of the Prior Art Conventional FETs are fabricated in semiconductor monocrystalline material layers grown on the surface of a monocrystalline substrate, such as silicon, germanium, or gallium arsenide, to provide the source, drain, and gate regions of the FET device. However, an FET device fabricated in bulk monocrystalline semiconductor material is considerably more costly than a device fabricated in silicon wafers, which are much more readily available. Attempts have been made to fabricate FETs in silicon, but these prior attempts have all been unsuccessful. In one attempt to form a field effect device having bulk monocrystalline silicon as the source and drain, the silicon was doped with nitrogen. The silicon was doped by introducing nitrogen into the substrate in an initial step, followed by a heat treatment to form polycrystalline silicon. The polycrystalline silicon was then annealed to form monocrystalline silicon. This method is described in U.S. Pat. No. 3,860,824. However, attempts to effect a p-n junction between the source and drain regions of the FET by this method resulted in failure due to the formation of a metallic whisker-like conductive path of metal impurities through the polycrystalline silicon region. Therefore, this method was abandoned. Other attempts to fabricate FETs in silicon involve the epitaxial growth of silicon on a single crystal substrate. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 3,821,217 describes an FET made by epitaxially growing silicon on a silicon-germanium (SiGe) layer on a silicon substrate. Similar efforts have also been attempted by other researchers. E. Iwakura et al. and H. S. P. M. Bok, in
