The goal is to develop an immersive experience that enables players to not only relive moments from past FIFA World Cups, but also become part of the on-field action. The technology opens the door to completely new ways of football play, and most importantly, allows players to become immersed in the World Cup atmosphere. What is FIFA HyperMotion Technology? FIFA is working with EA Sports and its development partner Sonderborg Gymnasium to create an authentic, dynamic football experience. FIFA HyperMotion Technology provides all the tools needed to create FIFA games that are the definitive versions of the past, and where gameplay is as captivating as the best matches ever broadcast on network television. The technology has been improved and refined through the use of EA Sports' proprietary EA SPORTS Ignite engine (formerly known as the Impact Engine), which powers the sports games of EA Sports. FIFA HyperMotion Technology's goal is to make a match as beautiful, believable and authentic as possible. "FIFA HyperMotion Technology is a new take on soccer – but where you've only ever felt confined by the boundaries of the human body, in FIFA HyperMotion Technology you can become part of the action." — Anders Holm, Head of FIFA

FIFA HyperMotion Technology aims to deliver on a number of objectives, all of which are influenced by the needs of the player. These objectives are: Provide an immersive soccer experience. Make the game enjoyable, regardless of how far the player is from the actual sport. Be a high-energy experience. Engage players at a higher level. Reward players in the game by increasing the level of skill required to progress. The degree of intensity and actions that the player performs will affect the outcome of a match in real-life and in the game world. Players will be able to relive the emotions of a match, thanks to the new player models, animations, player emotions and contextual off-field moments, which are all contributed to by EA's Sports Experiences team. FIFA HyperMotion Technology is a new take on soccer – but where you've only ever felt confined by the boundaries of the human body, in FIFA HyperMotion Technology you can become part of the action. Did You Know? Players are the stars of the show. In FIFA, we collaborate with the top level of players around the world to give them the tools to bring their game
