“The new generation of ‘i’ Motion should not only be the icing on the cake for FIFA players, but also make the shooting process of the game feel closer to real-life,” said Pia Kristensen, Senior Producer at EA SPORTS. “The aim is to give players the first-hand experience of shooting a football like no one else in the world has before.” This demo let you experience what it feels like to be a shooting player in FIFA 22. Put on your speed suit and start shooting over 200 passes, add-ons, dribbles, crosses, headers, aerial duels and regular tackles. After each strike from the left, you’ll hear the sound of a player taking a shot, complete with a hit sound and the feeling of a shot in mid-air. If you’re a baller, you’ll be able to experience the feeling of heading a shot directly in front of the goal. Put your headphones on and choose from multiple shooting sounds, including a personalized shoot and a versatile sound palette to fit your needs. Learn how to adapt the shooting and shooting experience based on your play style: use the help of skilled teammates to shoot the ball at a higher accuracy. As soon as you take the shot, you’ll get to see the reaction of the shot on the field, complete with dynamic lighting effects and the feeling of the shot on impact. The more you play, the more advanced ‘i’ Motion you’ll unlock. “HyperMotion Technology” is the forefront of adding unique, authentic player movements to FIFA on all platforms. At release, we’ll have more details on the depth and detail we’ve put into the technology, but for now, you can see exactly how it works. www.youtube.com/watch?v=_pO1RF3j2dk “For the first time ever, FIFA is coming to the PlayStation 4, and ‘HyperMotion Technology’ is the driving force behind it. We made a promise to ourselves, our fans and our partners at PlayStation that this game would be unique, and that’s exactly what we’ve delivered,” said Michael Denny, Senior Producer at EA SPORTS. “We want every facet of the game to feel more like playing football rather than playing FIFA, so ‘

Almost every current-gen game I've played has at least one Sim, usually more. With the release of The Sims 4, I wanted to finally share the reasons why Sim-based video games are some of my favorite. 1. The Sims Live Your Life Pleasing my Sims is one of the best things about video games. Whether its about a Sim always trying to find a hot new outfit, go to work, or simply do errands around town, I get more enjoyment from a game involving Sims, than one where I've got a goal to accomplish. If I can't make a Sim look and act a certain way, I often give up on playing that game. 2. Create Play Take my Sims into a future where you can do pretty much anything. All you need is a computer and the game. Building a city, having Sims fall in love, or simply cause a world-ending catastrophe is all possible with the right Sims and interesting content.
