There is news circulating that he was the member of the progressive movement but he was was also a great scholar. Aging of the Japanese population and the 2014 Japanese Five-Year National Plan for Aging Society: should population aging be accelerated? In 2006, the Ministry of Health, Labor and Welfare, Japan, established the 2014 Japanese Five-Year National Plan for Aging Society, which aimed to revitalize the Health and Welfare of the elderly. To inform this plan, the authors analyzed the key medical care items and outcomes of the 2013 Japanese National Survey of Medical Care Activities for Older Persons. The survey sample comprised elderly people aged  $\geq 65$  years, and a total of 9,313 subjects were analyzed (sex ratio, men:women, 6.4:1). The subjects were stratified by sex and five age groups: 65-69, 70-74, 75-79, 80-84 and 85 years and older. The proportion of normal metabolic function decreased with advancing age for males and females combined, by about 10% per decade. The proportion of pain and discomfort was highest among the elderly aged 85 and older (70.0%) for males, and oldest and oldest aged 85 and older (60.4%) for females. The proportion of depression was highest among the elderly aged 80-84 (30.8%) for males, and among those aged 80-84 (33.9%) and 85 and older (33.6%) for females. They also observed that the proportion of disability in daily living and instrumental activities of daily living (IADL) was highest among those aged 80-84 (about 12% per decade) for males and 75-79 years (about 18.4% per decade) for females. Correspondingly, the proportion of bedridden elderly persons was highest among the elderly aged 75-79 years (about 17.2% per decade) for males, and oldest and oldest aged 85 and older (41.2%) for
