A: It's not an installed program. That "xforce" you see refers to the file you see in the browser window. It's clearly intended to be opened as soon as you enter the download URL, so it's a fake "installer". Other than that, it's safe to assume that the program you were looking for is a cracked version of Autodesk Moldflow Advisor 2020. It's most likely not a real installer, but a ransomware/locker-type application, which might infect your PC if you downloaded it. A: It's a fake "Installation" file. It is intended to be opened after you have downloaded the file, so it is not a real file. As an archive file, it is safe to assume that the archive is a fake cracked version of Autodesk Moldflow Advisor 2020. You can use 7Zip to read, decompress and download the file to your computer. EDIT: I just found out that it also comes with an installer. So, I'll add that to my post. You should not download anything from that website. EDIT 2: Okay, I just tested it on two computers. First computer was an untrusted Amazon user and one of these programs not installed. Works as described. [The change of endotoxin content in blood of normal rabbits after the intravenous infusion of neutral proteinase]. This paper described the rabbit model and the methods to investigate endotoxin (ET) in this model. The steady-state level of ET in blood was 31.91 ± 6.07 ng/ml after intravenous infusion of bovine serum albumin (BSA) in BSA concentration of 0.12 g/kg body weight for 120 min. The concentration of ET increased by 29.7% at one minute after BSA infusion, decreased to the basal level in 30 minutes and did not increase in the rest period, but continuous infusion of BSA resulted in the increase of ET in blood. The level of ET of plasma was negative correlation to the protein content of plasma ($r = -0.8521$). The content of ET in ocular tissues was also measured. The ocular tissue content of ET was lower than that of plasma, and continuously infused BSA could increase the ocular tissue ET concentration. The ocular tissue ET content was also in negative correlation to the protein content of ocular tissue ($r = -0.8226$
