What's new in Sentinels Of The Multiverse:

The Sentinels of the Multiverse are fictional mass extradimensional sentinels that serve as guardians of the vast dimensional crossroads known as the Multiverse, which consisted of numerous universes. In some continuities, every sentient being is assigned a Sentinel by Caliborn after the mass extradimensional invasion of First Contact. History At some point, during an unspecified point in all possible universes, the Sentinels were the cosmic level defense plan of the mother world, Eternity, and in the main universe, Earth. An absolute majority of the Sentinels are Watchers, a class of being somewhere between sentient and intelligent which weaves omnipresence into reality. One however, War, was sent down into Earth's major rift, the Nexus, to initiate a human civilization and to prepare the way for intelligent space beings to integrate into the Earth. Caliborn, however, during his initial experimentations with time travel, sets the Watchers and his opponents, the Omnitrix, on a collision course that will destroy the Earth and cause the Second Infinite Realm to arise in the course of the conflict. Since that point, most of the Watchers are regarded as the best place to hide, even though Caliborn hides the full knowledge of his plans for them. Unlike in the Motherverse, where humans with the proper abilities have to be trained in preparation to fight and to become effective Sentinels, most humans that the Watchers chose through Second Contact were fully non-corporeal, aided only by their physical bodies. Most of these "Watchers" would serve the Watchers until their deaths, and they had the designation of "Energizer". Those with the desire to be Sentinels would then undergo additional training and would be designated "Editionists". In some timelines, such as the Teen Titans line of comics and cartoons, most of the Editions were all male but later, the girls would be given the chance to audition for the upgrade as well. By the later parts of the Motherverse time-line, there were no men left in it and all the Time Editions had to leave Earth; some moved to Earth-10 where they could live like humans, some went to Earth-34, and others went to protect Heaven, Elysium, and the Sol Dimension. Creation The role of the Sentinels was first created by Stephen King when writing the 1998 Avon Books edition of the anthology Dreamcatcher, by Bill Willingham as a practical fiction
