YORK—Containing most of the stories from the previous year (stories which are regularly collected and published), an edition of the Superman comic books, entitled Superman Year One, was published this week. In a staggering amount of news about this, the publishers of the comic books also announced that they had actually been publishing comic books all along, and in a more or less regular schedule. The comic book traditionally begins in the year 3014, on a date which was determined by a mnemonic device called a memory dot.

Each year starts a different calendar date, it's an Easter Egg for hardcore comic fans.

the comic in 2014.
Issue 2015 in 2015.
And so on. It turns out that Lois was shot, and that her death shocked Clark Kent and his friends. The official reason was the resurrection of the villain Brainiac — but the folks in Power Girl's hometown think there's more to it. Do Superman fans want to know the complicated
reasons for the murder? The real question is, do you want to read the new comic books when you

open the package to buy the new comic books? The obvious answer is yes. But the answer really depends

I have a flash movie which is responsive and autoadjusts itself to the width of the browser window. Now, I want to detect the width of the browser window and change the movie player to a static size in order to display the full width. I've searched a lot and most of the solutions are to use some event like window close or something like that. But I just want to detect the close and not necessarily click "close". I have some swfs on the pages, I wanted to make the swfs stop loading when user left the current page by closing the browser window. So, the swfs are outside the main swf and they are swf's loaded on demand, they are loading images from the external domains and load some text from other swfs which are not in my main application. So, I just want to know if it's possible to detect the browser window close (without event) in the swf. Thanks. A:

Not possible, the page has to be navigated to explicitly to trigger the closing of the window or tab. You can however detect when a tab closes, but that usually requires JavaScript to do so. Saint Francis of Assisi and the Brick Ship "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform, And He performs them in a manner beyond our feeble views." – William Cowper (1731-1800), English poet, born in Hackney, Middlesex, England and buried in the Little Gidding, nr.
