Axiom Verge was inspired by the 8-bit games of my youth, and the opportunity to work with a talented team of developers has made this dream come to life. The music in Axiom Verge was created by the talented composer Tom Happ (Brave Wave Games, Ghost Trick), who was tasked with creating the game's main musical theme and a score for each level. Some of the tracks were inspired by the video games of my youth, such as Metroid and Super Metroid, and others were created specifically for the game. The soundtrack is composed of classical guitar and bass, as well as percussion and sound effects. The music varies from tense and suspenseful to peaceful and relaxing, using instrumentation similar to early 8-bit music but in a modern context. There are three different versions of the soundtrack. The normal version only includes the first 17 tracks of the game, while the DLC version includes the 18th track from the in-game bonus level for a total of 25 tracks. The soundtrack is also available as a digital download on iTunes. What's New in Version 2.10 (06 Nov 2018) · Fixed some minor bugs · Optimized onscreen fonts a bit Important Information: The Axiom Verge soundtrack was created solely by Tom Happ. If you are a fan of indie video games or art in general, please follow the developers at their most recent social networks: Tom Happ (Brave Wave Games (Contact us at: What's New in Version 2.7 (23 Apr 2018) · Fixed problems with non-English users · Fixed some minor bugs · Improved some aspects of the sound What's New in Version 2.2 (23 Jan 2018) · Optimized loading speed · Fixed some minor bugs What's New in Version 2.1 (13 Oct 2017) · Fixed a crash · Improved performance What's New in Version 2.0 (17 Jun 2017) · Improved visual effects · Improved performance · Optimized game load speed What's New in Version 1.13 (17 Feb 2017) · Optimized sound buffer in memory (should improve sound quality) · Fixed weird bugs with MP audio · Fixed minor bugs What's New in Version 1.12 (25 Jan 2017) · Optimized loading

! Blazing Sands! Wave Pummeling! Air Battle! All launched together: giants and tyrants from so many worlds across time and space, clashing for dominion on worlds far and wide! All this, and more than you can imagine! Join now, and we'll bring you into the cross-firing, hell-hot blast furnace of epic real-time strategy battle! You see... We love strategy games. If there was more strategy, on more games, with more people saying 'suck it I-play-chris-barrett-curry-dammit' a little more than I-play-chris-barrett-curry-dammit, we'd have a lot more strategy games. ...And there's a lot more strategy games that are never released at all, or made by the guys who release games and get them finishing all the better. We love strategy games, but we love strategy games that get finished a lot better! We want to make strategy games that our community's aspiring strategy game-makers can use as the foundation of their own. We want to make strategy games that play differently and better, but that use those 3d-ish exploding unit launchers to make them tactically, intensely, intellectually engaging fun for the community as a whole. We want to play strategy games with strategy games, with a game so good that it feels like five or six strategy games get married in a tactical marriage of epic proportions. We want to make strategy games for the seriously strategy obsessed. We want to make strategy games that are better than any of the things you'll need to play, and we want you to know that we want to accomplish this for you no matter how much you want that dragon-firing machine mounted on a giant flying car that turns into a fuckin' tank that runs on napalm - we want to make strategy games for you! We want to make strategy games that are intensively tactical, that say little with much, and that make you happy to watch. We want to make strategy games for the community that are all powerful and open, and give everyone the chance to be great at a game's mechanics. We want to make beautiful strategy games, but also rule-breakers that break the game elements rules that influence what makes a strategy game great. We want to get away from lists of units and chronologically ranking who's generally stronger and more advanced and more powerful, and have simple abstract rules that

It is a free-roam and slow-paced game with a small number of songs and scenes with different levels. It will take about 30 to 40 minutes to beat the game. The story begins with a concert by Vigo that saves the soul from dead. As he fell into deep sleep, and came to know that the soul of interest has disappeared. As a result, he judged it and died. That's the beginning of the story. More than 100 Scenes of the story will be added after the game release. Comfortably free-roam on a small island town where we get to know Vigo who knows the music or the person we live with, like family and friends. Songs and stories with heartstrings are based on the author's experiences. It's up to you to which you want to listen.

-----Space Time Tone This game was made to give you a refreshing experience as if you are listening to some good music. It's not a game that you should just play casually. (Before playing the game, please make sure you have the following in mind. Note: The importance of the progress will be addressed when there are playable version of the game) For the character version: Vigo is a mousy looking fellow with the color of his skin being varying shades of light and dark blue and his hair in various colors too. His whole soul can be judged from his face. And he has a robot companion. For the background: The weather in this game is random. There might be days where the sky is cloudless and no wind blows. And other days when the wind blows furiously and there are wispy clouds. For the music: This is not a game with just a few songs. The use of the game engine that makes a combination of the rhythm of music. (The reason of using the engine, was to keep the size of the game small) As mentioned above, there are more than 100 songs in the game. The number of songs increase gradually as the game progresses. While there are some songs that start off catchy and require you to follow them, some other songs are emotional and teary. You will never get tired of listening to them. (The short songs cannot be added after the stage has been cleared) ▼What's in the game?▼ 1.Main character First there is a mea and it tells the
