The authors surveyed 35 patients with acquired anosmia as a result of head injury. The study was carried out at the Pitié-Salpêtrière Clinic of Neurology. It was apparent that most of these patients had associative visual memory impairment and general visual dysfunction. The authors discuss whether these patients have a single sensory cognitive disorder, or whether they have two distinct cognitive disorders, such as associative visual memory impairment and general visual impairment. They offer that the first hypothesis seems to be more logical and is more consistent with the authors' own clinical experience. However, one must bear in mind that the hypothesis is merely conjectural. The study may reveal the features and pitfalls in the diagnosis of the anosmic patient.During a Friday night "Dancing with the Stars" television taping the other day, host Carrie Ann Inaba asked a very poignant question to a guest panel member. "How do you judge, not only who is the best dancer, but who is the most likable?" The guest who was being questioned was singer, songwriter, and dancer Mayra Veronica, and she had some telling thoughts on the subject. In addition to dancing on "DWTS" last season, Veronica has been a successful musical performer in New York City, and even more. She is also a part of the Twitter Twitter feed @mayvoy, which is dedicated to bringing awareness to senior issues and serving as an escort for senior-aged friends. "I think you have to look at the person as a whole. You have to look at the person's personality and how they carry themselves," said Veronica. "Dancing is different than singing; you can tell from the outset of the show who is going to be good because of their personality, but you have to judge how likable they are. It's so subjective; you can't base it on just the dancing. You have to base it on who they are and what they're about." "DW

A 44-year-old male with progressive hoarseness over two years and fever was admitted to our hospital. He did not complain of any other symptoms. A chest computed tomography (CT) scan revealed a large mass in the anterior mediastinum. The tumor showed homogeneous low density on the plain CT scan. The tumor was radiolucent on a mediastinal window in a plain chest X-ray film and on a mediastinal window in a chest CT scan. The tumor was resected via a left lateral thoracotomy. The resected tumor was reddish-brown and soft. Microscopic examination revealed a proliferation of the neuroendocrine cells positive for chromogranin A. In this case, a thymic carcinoid was diagnosed.1. Technical Field The present invention relates to a method for fabricating a ferroelectric memory device, and more particularly, to a method for fabricating a ferroelectric random access memory (FRAM) device. 2. Related Art A ferroelectric random access memory (FRAM) device has a data processing speed equal to a dynamic random access memory (DRAM), and non-volatility of memory. A ferroelectric material has spontaneous polarization characteristic. According to a polarity of the spontaneous polarization, the ferroelectric material has two stable states, i.e., a high polarization state and a low polarization state. A polarization of the ferroelectric material can be controlled by a small electric field. The ferroelectric material can maintain data by using this characteristic. The ferroelectric material is classified as a material that loses its
