But I can tell you a very specific and distinct reason why I find myself bored most of the time. What is it? Why are you “bored”? Why is your brain and mind always looking for something to do? Why is it “always” hard for you to keep yourself entertained? Why do you feel “bored” so often? In order to tell you this, I will use the example of playing video games, which is exactly how I am bored most of the time. Why do you find video games boring? How often do you play video games? How often do you play video games only, and forget everything else? When you are out, are you just too busy talking to friends and/or playing with animals that you forget that you can play a video game? I am pretty sure you can relate to all of these statements! Unless you fall under the category of a sports fanatic, you can find yourself pretty easily bored with playing video games. In fact, this is one of the reasons why so many people do not enjoy playing video games. Because they have been conditioned to think “as a video game”, they do not appreciate the wonderful things that they can do in the real world. The subconscious mind lets the physical body do everything in the present time. This means that you cannot play video games at the same time that you are reading a book, enjoying your meal, or even talking to your friends. That is what is happening right now. Your brain is paying attention to the task at hand. If you have been introduced to video games from a young age, you probably grew up being trained to be active and use your whole body. For example, you probably did physical activities like running, swimming, jumping, and playing games. When you hear the word “Physical activity”, you tend to think about exercise, but there is a lot more to it than that. Physical activity is an opportunity for you

Basically, I want to validate that a checkbox has been clicked (true) or not (false) and if it has been clicked, I want to save the results and if not just skip. I found this question, which is almost exactly what I want, except that the question does not have an answer. I found this blog post, which shows you how to do it, but it has an issue I can't figure out. When I try to update, it does not execute the script, and shows this in the logs: System.DmlException: Update failed. First exception on row 0 with id 00136B000003u2bAAD; first error: CANNOT_INSERT_UPDATE_ACTIVATE_ENTITY, validateMain: execution of AfterInsert caused by: System.InvalidOperationException: Update failed.
